After the representative visited with students in the Honors Program in the past, Columbia offered scholarships to GPC students. Our students have thrived there.

Columbia University welcomes applications from transfer students every year. Many of these transfer students come from two-year colleges across the country, where they have not only excelled academically, but also often have non-traditional backgrounds with life experiences in their past. These life experiences are often seen as a unique dynamic to a student’s candidacy for admissions to Columbia, one which is actively sought by the admissions office of the School of General Studies at Columbia University. The School of General Studies is the finest liberal arts college in the United States created specifically for returning and nontraditional students seeking a rigorous, traditional, Ivy League undergraduate degree as full- or part-time students.
