QUOTED MATERIAL: USING ELLIPSES

An ellipsis is a literary device that indicates the omission of a word or words in a quotation from the original source. An ellipsis is three double-spaced periods separated from the text with single spaces:

Martin meant to imply a hidden meaning when he intimated that his character "transgressed beyond ... the normal bounds of human reason" (123).

Four dot ellipses (a normal period followed by the three spaced dots) must have complete thoughts on either side of the ellipsis. Use four dots in the following instances only:

- To omit the last part of a quoted sentence

  Example: She said, "I'm always tired .... Since I have nothing to do now, I'm bored. My feet hurt" (134).

- To omit the beginning of the next sentence

  Example: She said, "I'm always tired .... I'm bored. My feet hurt" (134).

- To omit a complete sentence or more

  Example: She said, "I'm always tired .... My feet hurt" (134).

- To omit one or more complete paragraphs

NOTE: It is recommended that you NEVER begin or end a quotation with an ellipsis.
