

"Hand Language Explainers" A Performance by Ari-Asha Castalia

Steve Wilson (the founder of the World Laughter Tour) said: "Regardless of the reason you laugh, the main purpose of laughter is to physically discharge tension and stress. Psychologically, laughter is about creating and maintaining relationships and morale." "Laughter activates reward centers in the brain," Wilson said, "causing a pleasant release of tension within the body."

Many studies have found that laughter does a number of positive physical things such as reduce stress, lower blood pressure, boost the immune system and protect the heart.

Ari-Asha's comedy performance of "Hand Language Explainers" takes a humorous look at the experiences and challenges in the life of an interpreter. You will laugh until you cry - and how can that be wrong?
